AGENCY FOR FOTER'S DYE WORKS

ISSUES ORDERS FOR JULY 4TH

May Sell Fireworks at Any Time but May not Use them Except during Hours Named by the Purgess. Regulations.

Burgess Eicholtz will place no restriction on the time for selling fireworks this year but has named a limit on the time for their use. The setting off of any kind of fireworks and the use of blank cartridges will be permitted between the hours of 7 a. m. and 12 midnight on Tuesday, July 4th, but positively prohibited at any other time.

As Independence Day this year falls on Tuesday, it is likely that the greater part of the fireworks sold to country people will be disposed of on the Saturday previous. The people who usually make a specialty of carrying fireworks for sale have laid in large supplies and Mr. Eicholtz does not feel that it would be right to interfere with their business.

"The fact that the hunting season is not in, doesn't prevent a man from buying a gun", the burgess explains, "and the fact that you can't use fireworks before the Fourth, oughtn't to prevent their being sold before that date."

Mr. Eicholtz, however, is thoroughly in earnest about not allowing the use of any pyrotechnics before seven o'clock Tuesday morning. The police will be given rigid instructions to arrest any one violating this order and they will be quickly taken before the burgess and fined. The reason for fixing the hour at seven o'clock is that people may not be aroused from their slumbers by the unnecessary noise.

The burgess will impose no restrictions on the kind of fireworks to be used except to prohibit the use of sky rockets. These he regards as very dangerous to property, and they may not be used within the borough. This restriction does not prevent their sale for use outside of the borough limits.

The State laws regarding the sale of fireworks are now more rigid than ever, one of the things that may not be sold anywhere in the Commonwealth this year being the fire balloon which for years has been one of the most popular articles sold for Independence Day celebrations. They were regarded as the cause of many fires throughout the State.

RETURN FROM TRIP

County People Come East in Two Touring Cars.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Orner and Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Gochnaur have just returned to their homes after an interesting rail and automobile trip. They went to Detroit by railroad and there purchased two Maxwell touring cars, making the return home in these machines without any trouble of any sort.

They touched the following towns on their way back, Ypsilanti, Toledo, Bowling Green, Findlay where they visited one of the largest oil refineries in the country, Carey, Marion, Delaware, Columbus, Newark, Zanesville, and Wheeling. Up to this point they traveled over the National Highway and then came east from Pittsburgh over the Lincoln Highway. They report a highly enjoyable and thoroughly successful trip.

HOWARD SUSPENDED

Arm not in Condition and he is Relieved for the Time Being.

On account of rheumatism which has made it impossible for him to work with credit to himself and to the advantage of his team, Earl Howard has been temporarily suspended from the Hagerstown squad. It is understood that he will be reinstated just as soon as he can get back into condition but it was hardly thought possible this morning that he could be got into condition to work against Gettysburg this week.

CLOSE OF FAIR

WAR FEELING IS APPARENT HERE

Apprehension Shown in Church Services on Sunday. Quick Response to Flag Floating Request. Other Signs Apparent.

While other towns nearby, Chambersburg, York, Carlisle, and Hagerstown, are sending their companies of National Guardsmen to Camp Brumbaugh and otherwise getting a taste of preparations for real hostilities in Mexico, Gettysburg is removed from all this excitement but none the less alert to the situation as shown by a number of instances of activity here.

In almost every church of town on Sunday prayers were offered by the ministers, imploring divine guidance to save the country from the scourge of war, but to give success to the arms of this country if such course would be found unavoidable. The impending hostilities were also touched upon in a number of sermons.

The request of Burgess Eicholtz to follow the country-wide movement to display the flag has met with a ready response in many parts of town. The Stars and Stripes float from a number of homes and from many business places. Comparatively few residents of Gettysburg do not have an American flag. Now is the time to show it.

The enthusiasm with which the Sons of Veterans have entered into their preparedness move is fine. Fifty members drilling every week, and the prospect of more recruits later on, show that Gettysburg will be well represented in the event of a call for volunteers. The State convention of the Sons held at Indiana, Pa., last week offered the services of 3300 men to their country if needed. They will, however, maintain their own companies and not enter the service of the National Guard.

Interest in the situation is keen as shown by the marked increase in the sale of local and city newspapers. Residents are eager to get the late editions and just as anxious for the early morning papers.

There are numerous rumors of local men preparing to enlist but, as yet, none have gone to any of the neighboring towns to cast their lots with the militia. There seems to be a general holding off until a call for volunteers is issued when Gettysburg, which gave her full quota in other wars, may be relied upon again to show her spirit of true patriotism.

EXPECT BIG GATHERING

Reformed Reunion Plans Provide for Speakers and Music.

Arrangements are being completed for the 27th annual reunion of the Reformed church at Pen Mar Thursday, July 20. This reunion is usually largely attended by the Reformed church people in Southern Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The speaker this year will be Prof. Calvin O. Althouse, superintendent of schools of Philadelphia. He is a forcible speaker and active layman in the Reformed church. Trinity First Reformed choir, of York, will render the special music for the occasion, having agreed to sing three numbers. There will also be special music by the Pen Mar orchestra.

Special arrangements for train service are now being taken up by the transportation committee. The program committee consists of Mr. Coblentz, Mr. Mullan and Rev. Frederick W. Bald, of Mercersburg. The publicity committee are W. C. Bierly, of Frederick, Md.; Howard E. Bair, of Hanover; George A. Hollinger, of Harrisburg; and David M. Hurley, of Hagerstown.

FULL PROGRAM FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Victor's Band, Morality Play, and The Mikado, among the Features. Several Strong Lecturers are Secured.

Announcement is made to-day, for the first time, of the detailed program for this year's Chautauqua. It is most attractive and will likely be fully up to the high standard established and maintained in other years.

Friday afternoon, July 14, will have the usual entertaining features of the first session and, as a special number, there will be a concert by the Choir Boys, a number of sweet voiced singers chosen from the choirs of the largest Boston churches. A parade will be held before the opening and pictures will be taken which will be shown in the evening. All who take part in the parade will be admitted to the afternoon session free of charge.

The Choir Boys will furnish the opening numbers of the evening and the lecture Friday night will be by Dr. Lincoln Wirt on "The Conquest of the Arctic". Nearly twenty years ago when the Alaska craze was on, he was one of those who went to the "frozen north," keeping step with the advance guard of civilization in those uncivilized communities.

Saturday afternoon Rosani, prince of jugglers, will entertain and Victor's Band will furnish the last hour of the program. Rosani will give the evening prelude, and the band will have the main section of the Saturday evening entertainment. Signor Lacerenza will conduct the band this year, and special numbers will be given by Venetian troubadours.

The usual services will be held on Sunday, with worship in the tent morning and evening. There will be no union Sunday School.

Monday afternoon, July 17, the Schubert String Quartet, will give a concert and in the evening Dr. Thomas E. Green will lecture on "The Burden of the Nations". Dr. Green's lecture is a particularly timely one just now. The Schuberts will furnish a prelude.

On Tuesday afternoon, July 18, the Strollers' Quartet will give a varied program of singing, impersonation, instrumental music, and bell ringing, and will appear again for a half hour in the evening. The main attraction of the evening will be a morality play "Happiness", given by the College Players and declared to be decidedly unique and unusual in every way. It will be one of the main events of the week.

The Bijou Trio will furnish the light entertainment on Wednesday July 19. Their program consists of opera and folk songs, pianologues and other numbers. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the great Brooklyn preacher will speak in the evening, giving his new lecture on "Makers of America". He will be remembered here as one of the strongest speakers who ever appeared on a Chautauqua program in Gettysburg.

Thursday afternoon, July 20, there will be the entertainment given by the children of the Junior Chautauqua, "Junior Town", popular last year, will again be used though this summer they will present another play, "Uncle Sam's Experiment." Uncle Sam himself will be in it. The lecture in the afternoon will be given by Dr. N. McGee Waters whose subject will be "The Greatest Chance in the World."

"The Mikado" will be presented Thursday evening as the closing feature of a delightful week. The production of the "Mikado" is under the direction of George V. C. Lord, of Boston, Schubert Stage Manager and Director of the famous "Hasty Pudding Plays" at Harvard. Special costumes have been made and special scenery painted. The biggest Chautauqua feature yet attempted.

There will be the usual series lecture every afternoon at the opening of the session. It will be given by the platform superintendent who has not yet been announced.

The Chautauqua tent will likely be pitched on Gettysburg Academy campus between the new building and the observatory, though this is not finally decided.

SIX THROWN OUT AS CAR UPSETS

Party on Way to Gettysburg to Visit at Taughinbaugh Home
Have Accident just before they Reach the Town.

When they turned their large seven passenger touring car aside to pass a team at the junction of the Carlisle and Biglerville roads about a mile north of Gettysburg this afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bristline and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tressler and son were all thrown out of the machine and Mr. and Mrs. Tressler severely hurt.

The car is the property of Mr. Tressler, who was driving it when the accident occurred. The Tressler family who live in Marietta were returning from a trip to Perry county where they visited the Bristlines. Both families are related to William A. Taughinbaugh, of York street, and they were on their way to the Taughinbaugh home when the accident occurred.

Mr. and Mrs. Bristline were immediately taken to the Taughinbaugh home in a passing automobile and Dr. Hartman was summoned. He found that Mr. Bristline was suffering from a dislocated shoulder and bruises at other parts of his body. Mrs. Bristline has severe lacerations on the face and the upper part of her body. The other members of the party were all able to care for themselves.

The car was righted with the assistance of people who came along the road shortly after the accident and it was driven to town under its own power shortly after two o'clock.

HOAR LEAVES

Wanted More Money than Directors
Felt he was Worth.

Topsy Hoar has quit the Ponies. He left this afternoon for Johnsbury where he received a flattering offer. Hoar was under a Gettysburg contract but the salary he was to receive was not stipulated. When he received the offer from Johnsbury he asked more than the local management could pay and more than the ability he had shown would warrant, so that the deal was declared off and the team is without his services. He started three games, was relieved in one, lost the second, and won the third.

Plank now has three pitchers on whom he can depend, Sherman, Baker, and Mumford. Hackman has left. Rasmussen, the Gallaudet pitcher, is here for a try-out. He has a good record in amateur circles but was hit heavily in several of his college games this year and is regarded with considerable doubt. He will have to make good right promptly. The team just now is badly in need of a fourth dependable pitcher in order to keep up the excellent record it has maintained for the past two weeks.

About 10,000 delegates are expected at the convention.

USE LOCAL TREES IN QUAKER CITY

White Ash from the Battlefield Taken to Philadelphia and Used there. Replace Trees that have Died.

Gettysburg trees are planted and growing finely in the center grass plots at Market Square, Church Lane and Germantown avenues, Philadelphia, according to a story published to-day which tells of two white ash trees from the battlefield being much admired by many Quaker City residents.

The story is told by Joseph Meehan, of Ellis Post, No. 6, G. A. R., a Philadelphia Civil War veteran, who has been a frequent visitor to Gettysburg and has many friends here. He says:

"The two American white ash planted at Market Square, Germantown, were brought from Gettysburg when about four inches high, coming from near Bushman's Dam, Culp's Hill. They were brought to Germantown and planted in my garden, where they were kept until about six feet tall, then planted at Market Square, in which work the following comrades of Ellis Post assisted: Louis Wagner, Fergus Elliott, Joseph Meehan, John Cooper, Naaman K. Floyd, John Man-ship, Theodore Schweriner and James Gregory. The date of planting was April 9, 1908—Appomattox Day.

"Some years later one of the two trees which had been planted on the Church lane side of the square was killed by a borer completely encircling the trunk. Previous to its death, myself and son, A. Rothwell Meehan, brought a few more seedlings from Gettysburg, from near Rock Creek and Spangler's Meadow, an American white ash among them.

When this ash had grown to about six feet I planted it in the place where the other ash tree had died, near the Church lane side of the square. The planting took place on September 1, 1914."

EXPECT BIG YEAR

Season.

Judging from appearance there never was a better outlook for the success of Pen Mar park, than this season and about the only thing that will prevent this will be continuous rains and cool weather as at present.

Professor John Bohl, Baltimore, a former member of Philip Sousa's band, and now musical director at Loews Hippodrome, Baltimore, who has charge of the Pen Mar orchestra this season, has been the very efficient director of the orchestra for fifteen years, a member of the orchestra for twenty-seven years, joining when it was under the leadership of his grandfather, John Ziegler, Baltimore.

Two other members who have seen long years of service are C. T. Dietrich and William A. Rosenberger, each having spent their twenty-seventh season in the orchestra.

WILSON CONFERS
WITH LEADERSPresident Arranges For Joint Session of Congress.

ULTIMATUM SENT CARRANZA

Release of U. S. Prisoners and Property Demanded as Well as Declaration of First Chief's Attitude.

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson called upon Chairman Stone, of the senate foreign relations committee; Chairman Flood, of the house foreign affairs committee, and Republican ranking members of those committees to attend a conference at the White House last night.

The Mexican situation was laid before the congressional leaders and the advisability of a joint session of congress discussed.

The president's action followed the sending of an ultimatum to General Carranza, head of the de facto government of Mexico, demanding immediate release of American troops captured in the Carrizal battle, surrender of American property seized and a definite statement of Carranza's attitude toward the United States.

Announcement that the president would urge a joint session of congress was looked on as indicating that he feared a declaration of war was not far distant. Although high government officials refused to give out any information, all agreed that relations between the United States and Mexico had reached the gravest state. It is considered in Washington that Mr. Wilson would not have summoned congress leaders on Sunday, unless it was with a view of having congress prepared to authorize a declaration of war.

Reply to the American ultimatum must be made by General Carranza himself or a responsible member of his cabinet, and not through a subordinate military commander.

The message was forwarded, it is understood, to J. Linn Rodgers, special representative of the state department in Mexico City. He is to press for an immediate answer not only with regards to the meaning of a message submitted to Secretary Lansing by Eliseo Arredondo on June 23, but also to the prior note in which the American government refused to accede to the Mexican demand for the withdrawal of the troops dispatched across the Rio Grande in aid of the de facto government and not for hostile purposes.

This demand is the answer to a message from the Mexican minister for foreign relations, setting forth that "our troops" (that is Mexicans) engaged American troops at Carrizal in accordance with orders issued by the Carranza government.

The message Rodgers is to deliver treats the message from the Mexican minister for foreign affairs as a "formal avowal of hostility" by the de facto government.

Carranza, in the telegram which Rodgers is to submit, is called upon to say if that is the meaning the American government is to attach to the despatch from the Mexican minister for foreign affairs.

The Mexican note of June 23 is to be made public today. It will be read by the average American as a frank declaration by the Carranza government that any move by American troops, except toward the Rio Grande, will be treated in the way the two troops of the Tenth Cavalry were treated at Carrizal.

There was not even a suggestion in the communication that General Gomez did anything other than he was ordered and expected to do. Not a hint that possibly he might have exceeded the orders given is to be found in it. On the contrary, it recited the fact that General Pershing had been notified that if he moved any of his troops south, east or west they would be fired upon and treated as enemies.

The message even went so far as to mention the fact that such a notice had been served upon General Pershing by General Trevino, and that Pershing had acknowledged the receipt of the warning.

In effect the message Rodgers is to deliver, or probably already has delivered to the Mexican minister for foreign relations, is a call upon Carranza himself to repeat to Rodgers the notice Trevino served upon Pershing, so that it may be official notice to this government that the de facto government of Mexico is determined to make war upon the United States unless American troops, sent into Mexico to "get" Villa are moved only with a view to their return to the United States.

Nor is there in the message delivered by Arredondo the least expression of regret over the Carrizal occurrence; nothing to indicate that Carranza may not be rejoicing over the opportunity to begin hostilities; only a plain recital that the de facto government, when it had Trevino serve the notice on Pershing, had made up its mind that war with the United States was to be preferred to a continuance of the search for Villa and other bandits, who had violated the American frontier, by American troops pursuing them upon Mexican territory.

The message Rodgers is to deliver to the minister for foreign relations contains nothing indicating what course the American government is thinking of pursuing. It leaves the door open, in the event Carranza should have changed his mind, for him to say the construction placed upon his despatch of June 23 is not what the fight at Carrizal meant.

No member of the administration, so far as can be learned, has any doubt about Carranza's intention to have this government fully understand that what was done at Carrizal is exactly what Carranza intends shall be done to every American military unit that moves into Mexico.

Carranza's answer to the demand Rodgers has or soon will deliver to the first chief can be used as the foundation for further proceedings by this government.

So far as Carranza is concerned, the United States declared war upon Mexico the minute the warning to Pershing was disregarded.

So far as he is concerned, nothing more can be done by the American military forces towards the accomplishment of the purpose for which they were sent south of the Rio Grande without encountering the armed resistance of the de facto government.

Not even a suggestion was made in the message Arredondo delivered that the de facto government has or will do anything to capture Villa or any other violator of the frontier.

VILLA GENERALS JOIN
CARRANZA FORCES2000 of Bandit's Soldiers Arrive in Chihuahua City.

El Paso, Tex., June 26.—Villa troops, Villa generals and former enemies of Villa are flocking to the Mexican colors.

Two troop trains have arrived in Chihuahua from the Laguna district with 2000 former Villa soldiers under Generals Calixto Contreras and Canuto Reyes. They have joined the Carranza troops in Chihuahua City and received the best barracks in the state capital, and are cheered every time they drill or appear on the streets.

Another train is expected in Chihuahua with the command of General Ysabel Robles, another Villa general, who surrendered the state of Chihuahua to Consul Andres Garcia for the Carranza government. Many other minor Villa leaders are joining the Carranza troops in Chihuahua City and are being sent to the field near Villa Ahumada. This news was brought to the border by one of the five men who have been at Parral, but who came out with the last party of Americans.

They were in Chihuahua City when the former Villa troops marched from the Mexican Central station to the barracks. He said the demonstration in their honor was as great as when Villa rode into Chihuahua City the first time, and there were a number of shouts of "Viva Villa!" heard in the crowd.

The return of Villa to take command of his former troops is being frequently predicted by his friends, who insist he is not dead, but has been hiding in the mountains of Durango. They say Villa will take this opportunity of wreaking vengeance on the United States, and that he will be received with acclamation by the Carranza government and the Mexican people.

Carranza Consul Andres Garcia issued a statement denying that the entire two troops of cavalry had been wiped out or taken prisoner.

Federalize Militia Troops.

Boston, June 26.—Half of the Massachusetts troops mobilized at the Framingham Camp were mustered into the service of the United States government Saturday, Adjutant General Cole announced. The other half were mustered in yesterday morning, so that the whole force, numbering upward of 8000, will be ready to move to the Mexican border as soon as necessary.

TROOPS CHARGED
MEXICANS TWICEWounded Captain Led Men and Stopped Machine Gun Fire.

MORE MAY HAVE ESCAPED

Missing Officer Thought to Rallied the Survivors for Homeward March.

Field Headquarters, American Expeditionary Force, Mexico, June 26.—Captain Morey and twenty-six of the men with him at Carrizal had not yet been heard from.

Hopes for their return have not been abandoned, as the cavalry sent to their relief is not due back for a day or two.

A motor train also has been sent out to meet them.

Trapped and fighting against heavy odds, the troops of the Tenth Cavalry, engaged at Carrizal on Wednesday, charged twice directly into the jaws of the ambush which the Mexicans had laid for them. With bullets in an arm and shoulder Captain Charles T. Boyd, the commander, remained in the saddle, leading his negro troopers until they had captured the concealed Mexican machine gun trench. Then he fell, mortally wounded, with a bullet in the eye.

This was the gist of the first detailed account of the engagement from the American sources, which was brought to General Pershing by Corporal Green, of Troop C, who was at Captain Boyd's side until he fell.

The Americans were flanked on both sides by the Carranzistas, who had partly surrounded the little command during a conference between General Felix Gomez, the Mexican leader, and Captain Boyd. In front was a concealed Mexican machine gun trench, from which a stream of bullets unexpectedly was poured into the American ranks.

Corporal Green said that Captain Boyd, although twice wounded by the first fire, immediately gave the order to charge, and the detachment rode at top speed, in a half of bullets, directly at the trench, capturing it just as the American leader fell. The Mexicans retreated to cover in a nearby adobe shack.

Lieutenant Henry Adair assumed command and ordered a second charge which drove through the shack, scattering the Mexican command. Corporal Green said he did not see Lieutenant Adair after this charge, and believed that he lost his life in it.

Meanwhile, Captain Lewis S. Morey, commanding Troop K, which also was partly surrounded during the parley, occupied another adobe house with his men, from which he engaged a second detachment of the Mexicans. While it is assumed here that Captain Morey was wounded in the fight, neither Corporal Green nor any of the other survivors reaching here knew anything of the outcome of his part of the fight.

It is believed here, however, that he may have collected the shattered remnants of the American command and is bringing them slowly and through obstacles to General Pershing's lines. The survivors arriving here said that the Carranzistas circled far around Carrizal after the engagement and overtook and captured a number of soldiers who had been holding horses back beyond sight of the point where the fight began.

Piecing together the fragmentary reports which have reached field headquarters, all except twenty-one of the eighty-four men engaged in the fight have been accounted for. These reports indicate that thirteen were killed and seventeen taken prisoner. Thirty-three have come into camp here in the last two days, most of them coming afoot over a desert, suffering the greatest hardships from lack of water.

PLAN OF MEDIATIONAmbassador Says Offer of Latin
Republics is Approved.

Washington, June 26.—Alonso Arredondo, ambassador designate of the de facto government of Mexico, announced that the Carranza government had accepted "in principle" the offer of the Central and South American republics to mediate between the United States and Mexico.

Mr. Arredondo said, however, that so far he had received only a preliminary expression on the subject from Mexico City and expected definite instructions some time today. Secretary Lansing's attitude is understood to be that there is nothing that could be submitted properly to mediation in the existing differences between the two nations. The secretary declined to say what his course would be if a formal mediation proposal were made.

An official declaration at the Mexican foreign office reiterated the gratification which the de facto government felt for the "kindly attitude that the Latin-American republics have taken toward Mexico in the present crisis," according to a despatch from Mexico City.

LEAPS TO DEATH ON DARE

Man Jumps From Excursion Boat and Panic Follows.

Delaware City, Del., June 26.—Harry Jensen, a pugilist, of Philadelphia, was drowned.

He was on the steamer President, which carried over a thousand excursionists below Augustine Beach, when some one dared him to jump overboard. He jumped a minute later from the second deck of the boat into the water. The boat was stopped as soon as possible.

A yacht in the rear of the President rushed to the man, who was swimming, and a life preserver was thrown to him. Being exhausted, however, he was unable to grasp the preserver, and sank.

After the drowning all rushed to one side of the boat. A panic then started, and someone shouted, "The boat's sinking." A general panic ensued. Men fought and scrambled, women and children fainted. Many were tripped upon and injured. A number were placed under arrest and taken to the hold of the boat, where they were confined. After the boat docked at Augustine Beach a number would not return to Philadelphia on the boat, but took other means of returning.

TOOK LAST GAME FROM FREDERICK

After Getting Seven Run Lead Gettysburg is Forced to Fight through Five Extra Innings for Victory.

In fourteen long innings the Ponies on Saturday registered their fourth victory out of last week's quintet of games when they defeated the Frederick Champs 8-7. The Plankites almost lost the game after getting a seven run lead in the early innings and time after time things looked exceedingly dubious.

Sherman was due to pitch but his arm was giving him trouble and Mumford, who had twirled against Hanover on Thursday, had to take up the duty on the mound. He was in danger in three of the first four innings, but not until the fifth, and after those seven runs had been tallied, did Frederick finally get to him. They scored three in this inning and two in the next when Plank hurried Baker to the mound. He held the Champs safe until the ninth when they added two more, and then through five agonizing innings the game continued until, with three on in the fourteenth and one out, Durboraw sent a long hit to center field which was good for at least a pair of runs.

The Ponies started around the very first time up. Boyne singled and Stein doubled, Koehler scoring both on the first of his quartet of hits. Five more were added in the fourth. Koehler opened with a single, and Frederick fozled Herman's bunt so both were safe. Bigler beat out a bunt and the bases were full with no one out. Oylar was passed forcing in Koehler. Mumford struck out. Durboraw got the signal for the squeeze and Herman dashed in. The pitch was wide and he had ample time, Durby never coming near the ball. He fled out a moment later and then Boyne singled scoring Bigler and Oylar. Stein hit over Orrison's head for three bases, scoring Boyne. Plank fled out ending Gettysburg's scoring until the memorable fourteenth.

Frederick got their tallies as follows. In the fifth Cook drew a pass and took third on a passed ball, scoring when Turner hit a mean one to Boyne. Agnew singled, and Oylar made a mess of handling Meyers' grounder so that the bases were filled. Then came Bobby Orrison with his mighty stick and walloped one far to the right field canvas. It struck the sheet about three feet below the top and two scored. Myer fled to Plank, ending the inning.

Mumford was still on the mound when the sixth was started. Corgan opened it with a two bagger and Cook was hit by a pitched ball. Both scored on Turner's two base hit. Baker was then sent in. Agnew hit to Bigler who caught Turner off second, and Morrison fled to Boyne ending the inning.

In the ninth Turner sent a hot liner to right but Ira gathered it in. The Ponies were still two runs to the good and with one out, things looked hopeful, but Agnew hit a hot one right by Muff Oylar who made a lame attempt to stop it. Morrison came through with a single, and Johnson was sent in to bat for Tex Meyers, responding at once with a two bagger that scored Agnew. Orrison sent a sacrifice fly that tallied Morrison. Myer's out ended the inning with the score a tie.

The Ponies had chances in the tenth and eleventh but couldn't produce the necessary blow and it was not until the fourteenth that the winning run came across the pan. In this frame Herman opened with a rattling single, and Bigler beat out a bunt. Oylar sacrificed both a base, and Baker was hit by a pitched ball filling the sacks. Durboraw was up and sent a long fly to deep center that was good for at least two. Herman galloped across and the game was won.

Bunts
Ira would do well if he would relieve his pitchers before their distress becomes so disastrous to the chances of the club.

In the final inning Baker fanned Agnew, Morrison, and Orrison. Some feat.

Oylar's lone hit was of the scratchiest sort. The ball was played to second to catch Herman but the attempt failed. Mumford was the only man in the line-up who didn't register a safe out.

Durboraw's difficult catch off Orrison in the first inning, when Agnew was on third, saved a tally. It was the third out.

Artie Koehler is surely some 45-centimeter gun. Toward the end of the game Bobby Orrison called to Maurer, "Look out, that boy gets on every time". Bobby had a lot of fun during the game, falling flat on the ground and exulting with his famous horse laugh when Plank was caught between second and third. Gussie Boyne was anxious to know whether Orrison had paid "that rabbit fine".

Pete Bigler wasn't worried over the outcome of the game after the thirteenth inning. Two loads of hay, drawn by grey horses, went by the grounds—a sure sign of victory, according to the third sacker.

Hanks called time in the ninth inning just before Johnson made his two bagger. Plank caught the point and insisted that Johnson be brought back to bat, but Hanks ruled that Baker had started to wind up before the call for time was made and that the play counted. It counted all right.

Morrison and Durboraw both had difficult catches in the outfield and came through nicely with pretty fielding stunts. Plank caught a hot one in the ninth.

The superstitious fans were to be seen several times in the game moving from one part of the field to another to change the luck.

All the batting averages were boosted again. In the five full games last week the Ponies tallied 58 hits. The errors increased too, but four wins out of five chances, and seven victories out of the last nine games will allow us to overlook those slips.

The last four days of the week the Ponies will be against Hanover and Chambersburg, the leading teams in the race,—hard hitting and fast fielding aggregations. Plank's charges will have to go some to keep up their record of the past two weeks.

Do you realize that Saturday's victory put Gettysburg only two and a half games from third place?

Friday and Saturday the Ponies had 35 hits and only 11 runs. Whew! Oscar Howe, of York Springs, who caught several games for Martinsburg this year is now catching for the Cumberland team of the Potomac League.

HORSE ARGUMENT ENDS IN SHOOTING

Wolf Hill Scene of Fracas Saturday Night when Discussion Comes to Disastrous Finish. Two Get Slight Wounds.

Drinking and arguments over the merits of a horse were followed by shooting on Wolf Hill shortly before midnight Saturday with the result Henry Gastley and John Gastley received a total of fourteen gunshot wounds. Their injuries are not serious. Ernest Hansford, who did the shooting, is lodged in the Adams County jail.

The three men concerned, and George Gastley, had been in Gettysburg during the evening where they had been drinking, and upon their return to the Hill stopped at the Gastley house where they engaged in a discussion of the merits of several horses. Hansford expressing his opinion in favor of a horse owned by John Gastley and saying that he (Hansford) could himself beat the horse of George Gastley in a 300 yard race.

George, it appears, became very angry at this declaration and some threats were made. Hansford hurried to his home on the old Weems Black place and secured his shot gun, telling his wife that he would feel safer outside of the house in the event of the Gastleys coming after him.

Hansford went to a small truck patch near the house and soon heard the Gastleys approaching. He called to them not to cross the boundary line between the two properties but they continued and he fired twice into the air. Hansford could not see the men but watched the lantern they were carrying and when they kept on walking he fired the third shot which took effect. The men were then about twenty paces from Hansford.

They came to town and were given attention by a physician. County Detective Wilson, Deputy Sheriff Hartman, and District Attorney Topper at once went to the scene, upon being advised of the occurrence by George Gastley, and placed Hansford under arrest. He made no resistance. When arrested he said he did not know whether or not he had hit the Gastleys the last time he shot.

PONIES' UP IN BATTING LIST

Sherman Next to Heaviest Hitter in the League. Other Figures out.

The official Blue Ridge League averages for the entire season up to, and including, Friday's games show that Gettysburg has climbed from sixth to fifth place in batting averages, and has dropped from first to third place in fielding. Gettysburg's twenty two hits made on Saturday will serve well in boosting the batting standing when the figures are compiled at the end of this week.

Hanover	832	367	44	.965
Hagerstown	892	450	49	.964

Chambersburg	838	414	57	.956
Martinsburg	815	416	70	.948

WILSON CONFERS WITH LEADERS

President Arranges For Joint Session of Congress.

ULTIMATUM SENT CARRANZA

Release of U. S. Prisoners and Property Demanded as Well as Declaration of First Chief's Attitude.

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson called upon Chairman Stone, of the senate foreign relations committee; Chairman Flood, of the house foreign affairs committee, and Republican ranking members of those committees to attend a conference at the White House last night.

The Mexican situation was laid before the congressional leaders and the advisability of a joint session of congress discussed.

The president's action followed the sending of an ultimatum to General Carranza, head of the de facto government of Mexico, demanding immediate release of American troops captured in the Carrizal battle, surrender of American property seized and a definite statement of Carranza's attitude toward the United States.

Announcement that the president would urge a joint session of congress was looked on as indicating that he feared a declaration of war was not far distant. Although high government officials refused to give out any information, all agreed that relations between the United States and Mexico had reached the gravest state. It is considered in Washington that Mr. Wilson would not have summoned congress leaders on Sunday, unless it was with a view of having congress prepared to authorize a declaration of war.

Reply to the American ultimatum must be made by General Carranza himself or a responsible member of his cabinet, and not through a subordinate military commander.

The message was forwarded, it is understood, to J. Lynn Rodgers, special representative of the state department in Mexico City. He is to press for an immediate answer not only with regard to the meaning of a message submitted to Secretary Lansing by Emilio Arredondo on June 23, but also to the prior note in which the American government refused to accede to the Mexican demand for the withdrawal of the troops despatched across the Rio Grande in aid of the de facto government and not for hostile purposes.

This demand is the answer to a message from the Mexican minister for foreign relations, setting forth that "our troops" (that is Mexicans) engaged American troops at Carrizal in accordance to orders issued by the Carranza government.

The message Rodgers is to deliver treats the message from the Mexican minister for foreign affairs as a "formal avowal of hostility" by the de facto government.

Carranza, in the telegram which Rodgers is to submit, is called upon to say if that is the meaning the American government is to attach to the despatch from the Mexican minister for foreign affairs.

The Mexican note of June 23 is to be made public today. It will be read by the average American as a frank declaration by the Carranza government that any move by American troops, except toward the Rio Grande will be treated in the way the two troops of the Tenth Cavalry were treated at Carrizal.

There was not even a suggestion in the communication that General Gomez did anything other than he was ordered and expected to do. Not a hint that possibly he might have exceeded the orders given is to be found in it. On the contrary, it recited the fact that General Pershing had been notified that if he moved any of his troops south, east or west they would be fired upon and treated as enemies.

The message even went so far as to mention the fact that such a notice had been served upon General Pershing by General Trevino, and that Pershing had acknowledged the receipt of the warning.

In effect the message Rodgers is to deliver, or probably already has delivered to the Mexican minister for foreign relations, is a call upon Carranza himself to repeat to Rodgers the notice Trevino served upon Pershing, so that it may be official notice to this government that the de facto government of Mexico is determined to make war upon the United States unless American troops, sent into Mexico to "get" Villa are moved only with a view to their return to the United States.

Nor is there in the message delivered by Arredondo the least expression of regret over the Carrizal occurrence, nothing to indicate that Carranza may not be rejoicing over the opportunity to begin hostilities; only a plain recital that the de facto government, when it had Trevino serve the notice on Pershing, had made up its mind that war with the United States was to be preferred to a continuance of the search for Villa and other bandits, who had violated the American frontier, by American troops pursuing them upon Mexican territory.

The message Rodgers is to deliver to the minister for foreign relations contains nothing indicating what course the American government is thinking of pursuing. It leaves the door open, in the event Carranza should have changed his mind, for him to say the construction placed upon his despatch of June 23 is not what the fight at Carrizal meant.

No member of the administration, so far as can be learned, has any doubt about Carranza's intention to have this government fully understand that what was done at Carrizal is exactly what Carranza intends shall be done to every American military unit that moves into Mexico.

Carranza's answer to the demand Rodgers has or soon will deliver to the first chief can be used as the foundation for further proceedings by this government.

So far as Carranza is concerned, the United States declared war upon Mexico the minute the warning to Pershing was disregarded.

So far as he is concerned, nothing more can be done by the American military forces towards the accomplishment of the purpose for which they were sent south of the Rio Grande without encountering the armed resistance of the de facto government.

Not even a suggestion was made in the message Arredondo delivered that the de facto government has or will do anything to capture Villa or any other violator of the frontier.

VILLA GENERALS JOIN CARRANZA FORCES

2000 of Bandit's Soldiers Arrive in Chihuahua City.

El Paso, Tex., June 26.—Villa troops, Villa generals and former enemies of Villa are flocking to the Mexican colors.

Two troop trains have arrived in Chihuahua from the Laguna district with 2000 former Villa soldiers under Generals Calixto Contreras and Canuto Reyes. They have joined the Carranza troops in Chihuahua City and received the best barracks in the state capital, and are cheered every time they drill or appear on the streets.

Another train is expected in Chihuahua with the command of General Ysabel Robles, another Villa general, who surrendered the state of Chihuahua to Consul Andres Garcia for the Carranza government. Many other minor Villa leaders are joining the Carranza troops in Chihuahua City and are being sent to the field near Villa Ahumada. This news was brought to the border by one of the five men who have been at Parral, but who came out with the last party of Americans.

They were in Chihuahua City when the former Villa troops marched from the Mexican Central station to the barracks. He said the demonstration in their honor was as great as when Villa rode into Chihuahua City the first time, and there were a number of shouts of "Viva Villa!" heard in the crowd.

The return of Villa to take command of his former troops is being frequently predicted by his friends, who insist he is not dead, but has been hiding in the mountains of Durango. They say Villa will take this opportunity of wreaking vengeance on the United States, and that he will be received with acclamation by the Carranza government and the Mexican people.

Carranza Consul Andres Garcia issued a statement denying that the entire two troops of cavalry had been wiped out or taken prisoner.

Federalize Militia Troops. Boston, June 26.—Half of the Massachusetts troops mobilized at the Framingham Camp were mustered into the service of the United States government Saturday, Adjutant General Cole announced. The other half were mustered in yesterday morning, so that the whole force, numbering upward of 8000, will be ready to move to the Mexican border as soon as necessary.

TROOPS CHARGED MEXICANS TWICE

Wounded Captain Led Men and Stopped Machine Gun Fire.

MORE MAY HAVE ESCAPED

Missing Officer Thought to Rally the Survivors for Homeward March.

Field Headquarters, American Expeditionary Force, Mexico, June 26.—Captain Morey and twenty-six of the men with him at Carrizal had not yet been heard from.

Hopes for their return have not been abandoned, as the cavalry sent to their relief is not due back for a day or two.

A motor train also has been sent out to meet them.

Trapped and fighting against heavy odds, the troops of the Tenth Cavalry, engaged at Carrizal on Wednesday, charged twice directly into the jaws of the ambush which the Mexicans had laid for them. With bullets in an arm and shoulder Captain Charles T. Boyd, the commander, remained in the saddle, leading his negro troopers until they had captured the concealed Mexican machine gun trench. Then he fell, mortally wounded, with a bullet in the eye.

This was the gist of the first detailed account of the engagement from the American sources, which was brought to General Pershing by Corporal Green, of Troop C, who was at Captain Boyd's side until he fell.

The Americans were flanked on both sides by the Carranzistas, who had partly surrounded the little command during a conference between General Felix Gomez, the Mexican leader, and Captain Boyd. In front was a concealed Mexican machine gun trench, from which a stream of bullets unexpectedly was poured into the American ranks.

Corporal Green said that Captain Boyd, although twice wounded by the first fire, immediately gave the order to charge, and the detachment rode at top speed, in a matter of minutes, directly at the trench, capturing it just as the American leader fell. The Mexicans retreated to cover in a nearby adobe shack.

Lieutenant Henry Adair assumed command and ordered a second charge which drove through the shack, scattering the Mexican command. Corporal Green said he did not see Lieutenant Adair after this charge, and believed that he lost his life in it.

Meanwhile, Captain Lewis S. Morey, commanding Troop K, which also was partly surrounded during the parley, occupied another adobe house with his men, from which he engaged a second detachment of the Mexicans. While it is assumed here that Captain Morey was wounded in the fight, neither Corporal Green nor any of the other survivors reaching here knew anything of the outcome of his part of the fight.

It is believed here, however, that he may have collected the shattered remnants of the American command and is bringing them slowly and through obstacles to General Pershing's lines. The survivors arriving here said that the Carranzistas circled far around Carrizal after the engagement and overtook and captured a number of soldiers who had been holding horses back beyond sight of the point where the fight began.

Piecing together the fragmentary reports which have reached field headquarters, all except twenty-one of the eighty-four men engaged in the fight have been accounted for. These reports indicate that thirteen were killed and seventeen taken prisoner. Thirty-three have come into camp here in the last two days, most of them coming afoot over a desert, suffering the greatest hardships from lack of water.

CARRANZA ACCEPTS PLAN OF MEDIATION

Ambassador Says Offer of Latin Republics is Approved.

Washington, June 26.—Albio Arredondo, ambassador designate of the de facto government of Mexico, announced that the Carranza government had accepted "in principle" the offer of the Central and South American republics to mediate between the United States and Mexico.

Mr. Arredondo said, however, that so far he had received only a preliminary expression on the subject from Mexico City and expected definite instructions some time today. Secretary Lansing's attitude is understood to be that there is nothing that could be submitted properly to mediation by the existing differences between the two nations. The secretary declined to say what his course would be if a formal mediation proposal were made.

An official declaration of the Mexican foreign office reiterated the gratification which the de facto government feels for the "kindly attitude that the Latin-American republics have taken toward Mexico in the present crisis," according to a despatch from Mexico City.

Detroit, June 26.—Henry Ford announced he is to erect an $8,000,000 plant to manufacture automobile parts.

The plant, which will have its own blast furnaces, will be in River Rouge, a suburb on the Detroit river. He said only thirty-seven of his employees belong to the state troops and "that when they come back it certainly will be without prejudice."

The total value of the products of these establishments was $20,791,085. At the census of 1909 there were 444 establishments, with products valued at $22,708,065. In addition fifty establishments engaged primarily in other industries manufactured buttons to the value of $182,961 in 1914.

TOOK LAST GAME FROM FREDERICK

After Getting Seven Run Lead Gettysburg is Forced to Fight through Five Extra Innings for Victory.

In fourteen long innings the Ponies on Saturday registered their fourth victory out of last week's quintet of games when they defeated the Frederick Champs 8-7. The Plankites almost lost the game after getting a seven run lead in the early innings and time after time things looked exceedingly dubious.

Sherman was due to pitch but his arm was giving him trouble and Mumford, who had twirled against Hanover on Thursday, had to take up the duty on the mound. He was in danger in three of the first four innings, but not until the fifth, and after those seven runs had been tallied, did Frederick finally get to him. They scored three in this inning and two in the next when Plank hurried Baker to the mound. He held the Champs safe until the ninth when they added two more, and then through five agonizing innings the game continued until, with three on in the fourteenth and one out, Durboraw sent a long hit to center field which was good for at least a pair of runs.

The Ponies started around the very first time up. Boyne singled and Stein doubled, Koehler scoring both on the first of his quartet of hits. Five more were added in the fourth. Koehler opened with a single, and Frederick fozzled Herman's bunt so both were safe. Bigler beat out a bunt and the bases were full with no one out. Oylar was passed forcing in Koehler. Mumford struck out Durboraw got the signal for the squeeze and Herman dashed in. The pitch was wide and he had ample time, Durby never coming near the ball. He fled out a moment later and then Boyne singled scoring Bigler and Oylar. Stein hit over Orrison's head for three bases, scoring Boyne. Plank fled out ending Gettysburg's scoring until the memorable fourteenth.

Frederick got their tallies as follows. In the fifth Cook drew a pass and took third on a passed ball, scoring when Turner hit a mean one to Boyne. Agnew singled, and Oylar made a mess of handling Meyers' grounder so that the bases were filled. Then came Bobby Orrison with his mighty stick and wallowed one far to the right field canvas. It struck the sheet about three feet below the top and two scored. Myer fled to Plank, ending the inning.

Mumford was still on the mound when the sixth was started. Corgan opened it with a two bagger and Cook was hit by a pitched ball. Both scored on Turner's two base hit. Baker was then sent in. Agnew hit to Bigler who caught Turner off second, and Morrison fled to Boyne ending the inning.

In the ninth Turner sent a hot liner to right but Ira gathered it in. The Ponies were still two runs to the good and with one out, things looked hopeful, but Agnew hit a hot one right by Muff Oylar who made a lame attempt to stop it. Morrison came through with a single, and Johnson was sent in to bat for Tex Meyers, responding at once with a two bagger that scored Agnew. Orrison sent a sacrifice fly that tallied Morrison. Myer's out ended the inning with the score a tie.

The Ponies had chances in the tenth and eleventh but couldn't produce the necessary blow and it was not until the fourteenth that the winning run came across the pan. In this frame Herman opened with a rattling single, and Bigler beat out a bunt. Oylar sacrificed both a base, and Baker was hit by a pitched ball filling the sacks. Durboraw was up and sent a long fly to deep center that was good for at least two. Herman galloped across and the game was won.

Bunts
Ira would do well if he would relieve his pitchers before their distress becomes so disastrous to the chances of the club.

In the final inning Baker fanned Agnew, Morrison, and Orrison. Some fact.

Oylar's lone hit was of the scratchiest sort. The ball was played to second to catch Herman but the attempt failed. Mumford was the only man in the line-up who didn't register a safe one.

Durboraw's difficult catch off Orrison in the first inning, when Agnew was on third, saved a tally. It was the third out.

Artie Koehler is surely some 45-centimeter gun. Toward the end of the game Bobby Orrison called to Maurer, "Look out, that boy gets on every time". Bobby had a lot of fun during the game, falling flat on the ground and exulting with his famous horse laugh when Plank was caught between second and third. Gussie Boyne was anxious to know whether Orrison had paid "that rabbit fine".

Pete Bigler wasn't worried over the outcome of the game after the thirteenth inning. Two loads of hay, drawn by grey horses, went by the grounds—a sure sign of victory, according to the third sacker.

Hanks called time in the ninth inning just before Johnson made his two bagger. Plank caught the point and insisted that Johnson be brought back to bat, but Hanks ruled that Baker had started to wind up before the call for time was made and that the play counted. It counted all right.

Morrison and Durboraw both had difficult catches in the outfield and came through nicely with pretty fielding stunts. Plank caught a hot one in the ninth.

The superstitious fans were to be seen several times in the game moving from one part of the field to another to change the luck.

All the batting averages were boosted again. In the five full games last week the Ponies tallied 58 hits. The errors increased too, but four wins out of five chances, and seven victories out of the last nine games will allow us to overlook those slips.

The last four days of the week the Ponies will be against Hanover and Chambersburg, the leading teams in the race,—hard hitting and fast fielding aggregations. Plank's charges will have to go some to keep up their record of the past two weeks.

Do you realize that Saturday's victory put Gettysburg only two and a half games from third place?

Friday and Saturday the Ponies had 35 hits and only 11 runs. Whew!

Oscar Howe, of York Springs, who caught several games for Martinsburg this year is now catching for the Cumberland team of the Potomac League.

HORSE ARGUMENT ENDS IN SHOOTING

Wolf Hill Scene of Fracas Saturday Night when Discussion Comes to Disastrous Finish. Two Get Slight Wounds.

Drinking and arguments over the merits of a horse were followed by shooting on Wolf Hill shortly before midnight Saturday with the result Henry Gastley and John Gastley received a total of fourteen gunshot wounds. Their injuries are not serious. Ernest Hansford, who did the shooting, is lodged in the Adams County jail.

The three men concerned, and George Gastley, had been in Gettysburg during the evening where they had been drinking, and upon their return to the Hill stopped at the Gastley house where they engaged in a discussion of the merits of several horses. Hansford expressing his opinion in favor of a horse owned by John Gastley and saying that he (Hansford) could himself beat the horse of George Gastley in a 300 yard race.

George, it appears, became very angry at this declaration and some threats were made. Hansford hurried to his home on the old Weems Black place and secured his shot gun, telling his wife that he would feel safer outside of the house in the event of the Gastleys coming after him.

Hansford went to a small truck patch near the house and soon heard the Gastleys approaching. He called to them not to cross the boundary line between the two properties but they continued and he fired twice into the air. Hansford could not see the men but watched the lantern they were carrying and when they kept on walking he fired the third shot which took effect. The men were then about twenty paces from Hansford.

They came to town and were given attention by a physician. County Detective Wilson, Deputy Sheriff Hartman, and District Attorney Topper at once went to the scene, upon being advised of the occurrence by George Gastley, and placed Hansford under arrest. He made no resistance. When arrested he said he did not know whether or not he had hit the Gastleys the last time he shot.

PONIES' UP IN BATTING LIST

Sherman Next to Heaviest Hitter in the League. Other Figures out.

The official Blue Ridge League averages for the entire season up to, and including, Friday's games show that Gettysburg has climbed from sixth to fifth place in batting averages, and has dropped from first to third place in fielding. Gettysburg's twenty two hits made on Saturday will serve well in boosting the batting standing when the figures are compiled at the end of this week.

	P.O.	A.	E.	Pct.
Hanover	832	367	44	.965
Hagerstown	892	450	49	.964

Chambersburg	838	414	57	.956
Martinsburg	815	416	70	.948
Frederick	803	422	86	.934

In batting Martinsburg was the greatest sufferer losing 15 points and dropping from first to third position. Chambersburg lost one-half of a point, but jumped from third to first place. Hagerstown dropped a point, but remained in second. Hanover went down five points and remained in fourth position. Gettysburg gained three, the only team showing a gain over the previous week, and advanced from last to fifth, while Frederick lost 11 points, and dropped from fifth to last. The grand average of loss in team batting for the week was 8 points, giving the teams the following averages:

NEW OXFORD

New Oxford—A horse belonging to Roy Taughinbaugh, proprietor of the New Oxford livery stable is in a serious condition on account of the loss of blood. Calvin Miller and Leslie Hensel held the horse to use on a fishing trip early Saturday morning. When they were ready to return, they found the horse standing loose near a tree. The strap with which it was tied was not broken and it is believed the horse was untied while the men were fishing.

CHAPTER VIII—Lorelei goes shopping and meets Miss Demorest, notorious dancer, who takes her home to tea. Lorelei learns that the dancer is not what is said of her.

CHAPTER XI.

During the last act of the matinee on the day following Lorelei was surprised to receive a call from John Merkle. "The Judge" led him to her dressing room, then shuffled away, leaving him alone with her and Mrs. Croft.

"I hope I haven't broken any rules by dropping in during your office hours," he began.

"Theatrical rules are made to be broken; but I do think that you are indiscreet. Don't you?"

The banker had been using his eyes with an interest that betrayed his unfamiliarity with these surroundings. "I was on my way uptown and preferred not to telephone," he looked meaningfully at Croft; and Lorelei, interpreting his glance, sent the dresser from the room on some errand. "Well, the game worked," said Merkle. "Mrs. Hamilton has left home and commenced suit for divorce. If our friend Miss Lynn had set out to ruin Jarvis socially—and perhaps financially—she couldn't have played her cards better."

"Is that what you came to tell me?" Merkle hesitated. "No," he admitted. "It isn't; but I'm a bit embarrassed now that I'm here. I suppose your mother told about seeing me?"

"My mother?" Lorelei's amazement was convincing, and his keen eyes softened. "When did you see mother? Where?"

"Yesterday, at my office. Didn't you know that she and your brother had called?"

Lorelei shook her head; she felt sick with dread of his next words.

"It was very unpleasant, I fear, for all of us."

"What did they want?" The girl was still smiling, but her lips beneath the paint were dry.

"They felt that I had—er—involved you in a great deal of notoriety. From what they said I judged that you shared their feelings." He paused awkwardly once more, and she motioned him to continue. "We didn't get on very well, especially your brother and I; for he presumed to—criticize my relations with you and—er—my motive in taking you to ride the other night. I believe I was quite rude to him; in fact, I had the watchman eject him, not daring to trust myself."

"They asked for—money?" Lorelei averted her face, for she could not bear to meet his frank eyes.

"Yes—what I considered a great deal of money. I understood they represented you. They didn't insist, however; they offered me a choice."

"Choice? Of what?"

"Well—I inferred that marriage would undo the wrong I had—"

"Oh!" Lorelei rose with a gasp. Bravely she stilled the tremor of her lips. "Tell me—the rest."

"There isn't much more. Your mother was quite hysterical and—noisy. To day a lawyer came to see me. He offers to settle the whole matter, but I prefer dealing directly with you."

"Do you think I knew anything about it?" she cried indignantly.

"No, I do not think so now. Yesterday I was too much surprised and too angry to know just what I did think. It's perfectly true, however, that I was to blame for the unfortunate outcome of the ride, and I want to make amends for any injury—"

"Weren't you injured, too, by the publicity?"

Merkle showed his teeth in a mirthless smile.

"That's neither here nor there. Please—leave me, and—let me think this over. I must do something quickly, or—I'll smother."

"I'm glad I came," said he, rising. "I'm glad I made sure."

"So am I. What you have told me has made a great difference in—everything. Don't allow them to—"

She hesitated and her voice broke. "I can't say it. You must think I'm—" unspeakable."

He shook his head gravely. "No, I merely think you are very unfortunate. I think you need help more than any girl I ever knew."

"I do. I do."

"But I am not the one to give it—at least not the kind of help you need."

"I'll need help more than ever—after tonight."

"Yes? Why?"

"Because I'm going to leave home."

Lorelei's head was up, and she spoke with a note of defiance.

"Then perhaps I can do something."

He seated himself again. "You will need money."

"Oh, no. I have my salary and the other revenues you know about. I have kept my family for two years."

"Work won't hurt you, but why force yourself to go on with those other things? They're not to your liking, I'm sure."

"My mother and father must live. There isn't enough—don't you see?—There isn't enough for all of us unless I—graff like the other girls."

Merkle broke out impatiently: "Make an end of it. I'll finance you."

She laughed a little harshly. "Don't think for an instant that I'd venture to expect anything in return. I won't trouble you; I won't even see you. Nobody will ever know. I wouldn't."

"Make an End of It. I'll Finance You."

miss the money, and I'd really love to do it. You tried to do me a favor—"

"There's no use arguing."

"Well, don't be stubborn or hasty. You could use—say, ten thousand dollars. It would keep you going very nicely, and really it's only the price of a new auto."

"Why do you offer me so much?" she asked, curiously.

"Because I like you— Oh, I mean 'like,' not 'love.' Because I think you're good and will need money to remain good. You're not an ordinary woman, Miss Knight; you can't live as ordinary women live, now that you're famous. New York won't let you."

"You're very kind and generous after all that has occurred and after knowing my reason for being here."

"My dear child, you didn't choose your family, and as for the other, the women of my set marry for money, just as you plan to do. So do women everywhere, for that matter, and many of them make excellent wives—yes, far better than if they had married poor men. Few girls as beautiful as you in any walk of life are allowed to marry for love. Trust me, a woman like you, if she lives up to the obligations of wifehood, deserves better than one who takes a man for love and then perhaps goes back on her bargain. Will you accept my offer?"

"No. But I thank you."

"Think it over; there is no hurry, and remember I want to help." With one of his infrequent, wan smiles, he extended his hand, and Lorelei grasped it warmly, though her face was set and strained.

She was far too well balanced for hasty resolutions, but her mind, once made up, was seldom changed. It distressed her grievously to leave her people, but at the thought of remaining longer with them every instinct rebelled. Her own kin, urged by greed, had not hesitated to cheapen and degrade her; their last offense coupled with all that had gone before, was more than could be borne. Yet she was less resentful than sad, for it seemed to her that this was the beginning of the end. First the father had been crippled, then the moral fiber of the whole family had disintegrated until the mother had become a harpy, a shameless hunter of men. Now the home tie, that last bond of respectability, was to be broken.

Her first impulse was to take up her abode with Adoree Demorest, but a little thought showed the inadvisability of that. In her doubt she appealed to Lias, broaching the subject as the two girls were dressing after the performance.

When Lorelei had made known his decision, the other girl nodded her approval.

"I don't blame you a bit; a girl needs liberty. I have five rooms, and a Jap to take care of them; they're lovely."

"I can't afford an expensive place."

"Well, there are some three-room flats in the rear, and—I have it! Gertrude Moore kept one, but she's gone on the road. It's all furnished, too. If it hasn't been sublet you can get it at your own terms. The building is respectable, too; it's as proper as the Ritz. I'm dining alone tonight. Come to dinner with me and we'll find out about it."

Lorelei would have preferred a different location, not particularly desiring to be near Lias; but there was no time in which to look about, and the necessity that faced her made any assistance welcome. Without more discussions she agreed, and the two girls rode uptown together.

The Elegancia, where Lias lived, was a painfully new, overelaborate building, with a Gothic front and a Gotham rear—half its windows painted with rental signs. Six potted palms, a Turkish rug and a jaundiced Jamaican elevator boy gave an air of welcome to the ornate marble entrance hall.

Lias fitted a key to the first door on the right as they went in, explaining, "I'm on the ground floor, and find it very convenient."

"This place is too grand for me," Lorelei objected.

"Oh, offer your own price for Gertrude's flat if you like it. They're crazy for tenants. It's cheaper than hotels—if you want to save money."

Lorelei was surprised to find her friend's quarters not only richly but lavishly furnished. The decorations were harmonious and bespoke a reckless disregard of cost. A duffy Japanese panel with protruding eyes and distorted visage capered deliciously at its mistress's feet.

But the objects that intrigued the visitor most strongly were several paintings. They were of a kind she had seldom seen, and in the afternoon light one stood out with particularly startling effect. It was a dusky landscape; there was a stream, a meadow edge, trees just growing black against a coming sunset, a herd of cattle coming out of the west. Before this picture Lorelei paused, staring with wide eyes of wonder.

Lias flung her hat carelessly into a chair, lit a cigarette from a Tiffany humidor, then turned with the spaniel in her arms and, beholding her guest with rapt, upturned face, remarked, with a laugh:

"Looks like the real thing, doesn't it?"

"Oh—it's wonderful—so clean and cool and quiet! I've seen cattle in Yale that looked just like those, when I went barefoot in the grass."

"Some Dutchman painted it—his name's on the corner. He's dead now, I believe. It used to hang in some museum—I forget where. I like pictures of women best, but—"

She shrugged and left the sentence unfinished. "There's a dandy in my bedroom, although it didn't cost half as much as that barnyard thing. The frame's a foot wide and covered with solid gold."

"I had no idea you lived like this."

Lorelei peered through a pair of French doors and into a perfectly appointed library, with a massive mahogany table, deep lounging chairs, a writing desk, and a dome-crowned reading lamp.

"My study," Lias laughed, shortly. "That's where I improve my mind—not. The books are deadly. Now comes Hittory Koo must have dinner ready. His name isn't Hittory Koo, but it sounds like it, and he's the cutest little thing; got the cutest little swing."

She moved down the hall, humming the chorus of the senseless popular song from which she had quoted.

Everywhere was the same evidence of good taste in decoration and luxury of equipment, but a suspicion had entered Lorelei's mind, and she avoided comment. Hittory Koo was cook, butler and house-boy, and in view of Miss Lynn's disorderly habits it was evident that he had all he could do to keep the place presentable. His mistress ate without appetite and in a hypercritical mood that took no account of the wasteful attempts to please her. Quite regardless of the patient little Jap, she found fault with him savagely, so that Lorelei was often painfully embarrassed.

"So you like my home, do you?" she queried, after a time.

"I've never seen one so beautiful."

Lias nodded. "Hittory sleeps out, and that leaves me the whole place. Jarvis furnished it, even to the books, and I'm studying to be a lady." Again she laughed mockingly. "I make a bluff at reading, but so long as I talk about Napoleon he never thinks to question me. I know that French gunk backward."

"I wish I had a hobby—something to interest me, something to live for," said Lorelei, lamely.

"Yes. It gives you something to think about when you're alone. It helps you to—stand things." For the first time Lias showed a trace of feeling in her voice; she dropped her chin into her palm and, leaning upon the table, stared as if at a vision. Her dark eyes were somber, her brows were lowered and drawn together.

The slipshod informality of the meal, the constant fainting of the hostess, made it something of a trial. Lorelei was not sorry when it was over and Lias took her to look at the vacant flat.

Miss Moore's apartment offered a wide contrast to the one they had just quitted, being very small and very modestly furnished; but it was on the second floor, convenient to both elevator and stairway, it boasted a piano, and the superintendent allowed his prospective tenant to name her own terms. She descended with relief, feeling that she had made not a bad bargain.

She stated, as she sank into Lias' big library chair, "I feel quite independent at last. The rent is ridiculous, and I can do my own cooking."

"Don't make a fool of yourself. You can do as well as I've done. You have the looks."

"But I'm not engaged to a multimillionaire."

"It seems queer, when I think of it," Lias mused. "Jarvis is one of the richest men in New York, and he made his money out of the steel business—the business into which I was born. Have you ever been through a mill?"

"No."

"It's wonderful, terrible. I can smell the hot slag, the scorching cinders, the smoke, to this day. Some nights I wake up—screaming, it's so vivid. I see the glare of the furnaces, the belching flames, the showers of sparks from the converters, the streams of white-hot metal, and they seem to pour over me. I have the same dream always; I've had it ever since the night after my father was killed."

"You told me he was killed in a steel mill."

"Yes, before my eyes. I saw it." Lias shuddered. "I was a little girl then, but I've never forgotten. We were poor, dreadfully poor, like all the Jews— Oh, yes; didn't you know I'm a Jew?"

"Then 'Lias Lynn'—?"

"Stage name. It's really Lily Levin. We were Polish. I was dragged up, along with the other workmen's children, in the soot and grime of the Pennsylvania mills. 'Hell must be like those mills—it couldn't be worse.'"

Lorelei had never heard her roommate speak with such feeling nor in such a strain. But Lias seemed quite unconscious of her little burst of eloquence. She was seated, leaning forward now with hands locked between ing that she had made not a bad bargain.

ALL OF BUKOWINA IN RUSSIAN HANDS

Last Big Town in Austrian Crownland Captured.

GERMANS START OFFENSIVE

Violent Attacks Are Being Made in Volhynia by the Teutons on the Czar's Forces.

London, June 26.—The Russians have won possession of the entire Austrian crownland of Bukowina, says a Reuter despatch from Petrograd.

They have occupied the town of Kimpulung, in the extreme southern part of the province in the foothills of the Carpathians, the last important place remaining in Austrian hands and with it have taken more than 2000 prisoners, the despatch says.

A Berlin despatch says that violent attacks on the Austro-German forces, which have counter-attacked the Russian offensive in Volhynia are being continued. The war office announced that all these attacks, made repeatedly with strong forces, had been repulsed.

The despatch says the German counter attack against the Russians under General Brussloff in Volhynia has now developed over a front of eighty miles extending from Kolki on the Stry river, almost to the Galician frontier. General von Linsingen's forces have enveloped the Russians who had driven a big bend into the Austro-German lines in front and on both flanks and now, according to German reports, are slowly but surely pressing the Russians back all along the line in the general direction of Lutsk.

Although considerably reinforced von Linsingen is confronted by highly superior numbers, which, however have been unable to check his strong attacks and start the Russian steam roller again in the direction of Kovetov and Vladimir-Volynski.

Concerning the German progress the Berlin official statement says:

"General von Linsingen's forces advanced to and beyond the Zublino Viaty-Zwinatchez line. Fierce counter attacks were repulsed. The number of Russian prisoners is steadily growing."

The Russian losses are described as enormous. Russian officers time and again led their men in desperate but fruitless charges against the German lines.

The country covered by these engagements is extremely difficult, impeded by woods and swamps, and much of the fighting therefore has been at close quarters.

To relieve the pressure upon this semi-circle before Lutsk the Russians have resumed the offensive against General Count von Bethmer's lines along the Galician frontier.

The capture by the Russians of the town of Kuty in Galicia across the Bukowina border, at the foot of the Carpathian mountains, was announced by the Petrograd war office.

The whole of the Austrian crownland of Bukowina, with the exception of the western foothills of the Carpathians, whither the Austrians are now retreating, is in the hands of the Russians.

On Field Marshal von Hindenburg's front the fighting has extended to the Ognisky canal front, north of Pinsk. The canal separates the Russian and Teuton lines, and the German offensive movement here is designed to add to the pressure exerted against General Brussloff's northern wing.

German troops repulsed attempts of the Russians to advance south of Iloukist and north of Widzy, in the Dvinsk sector, according to the official statement received from German army headquarters in Berlin.

ITALY STARTS NEW DRIVE

Gen. Cadorna. Hints at Momentous Events in Near Future.

Rome, June 26.—That the Italian army is already launching a drive against Austria that will be one of the biggest events of the year is hinted at in a statement issued by Lieutenant General Count Cadorna.

While he speaks of a counter-offensive having successfully been begun, it is believed that the war office has information of momentous events that are about to be undertaken in the new offensive.

The fact that there has been a great concentration of forces recently is also told by Lieutenant General Count Cadorna.

Martial Law for Arizona.

Nogales, Ariz., June 26.—After a conference with Sheriff McKnight and the Mayor of Nogales over the menace to Americans through the possession of arms and ammunition by Mexican residents, Governor Ruml indicated that he soon would proclaim a modified form of martial law by which a strict supervision over the sale and carrying of arms may be maintained throughout the state.

Makes Record for Berries.

Federalburg, Md., June 26.—All previous records for shipments of strawberries from Federalburg have been broken this year, as there have been shipped seventy-five carloads, or 500,000 quarts. The price averaged 7½ cents a quart, which means $45,000 for the growers, while the pickers shared $9000.

10,000 VISITORS OVERRUN MT. GRETN

Food and Clothing Taken to Citizen Soldiers.

Mt. Gretna, Pa., June 26.—Despite the announcement that no excursions trains would be run to the mobilization camp here yesterday, more than ten thousand visitors were on the state reservation, six thousand of them, mostly from Lebanon and Central Pennsylvania cities, swamped the Cornwall & Lebanon railroad so thoroughly that troop trains were impounded as soon as they were emptied then sent to Lebanon and put into the service of the local line.

The First and Second Troops, Philadelphia City Cavalry, arrived shortly after 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and were followed by the other ten troops at frequent intervals. The six batteries of artillery commenced to arrive about noon.

Great numbers of persons came by auto, mostly from more distant points, and the roads leading out of Mt. Gretna were lined with wrecks of cars that were unable to stand the rocks and rugged hills. Some of the cars were disabled in collisions on the narrow highways. No serious injury resulted to any of the tourists. That the great majority of the autos made the trip regardless of obstacles was apparent from the hundreds which were parked in the camping region. Many of the visitors brought food and clothing for men who enlisted in the last few days and who left home without having made proper provision in the way of underwear.

MUTTON EN CASSEROLE.
Use the best end of neck of mutton boned and with all fat trimmed off. Stuff it with veal stuffing. Tie it into shape. Place in a deep casserole some fat bacon, sliced carrot, turnip and onion and the meat and fry until the meat is colored; then add a pint of stock. Cover and cook for an hour and a half to two hours in a fairly hot oven. Remove the fat from the liquor. Before serving take the liquor and vegetables and sieve them, brown and color the sauce. Replace the bacon, cut the meat into portions, pour the sauce over and make very hot. If liked add mushrooms or some cooked sausage cut into small pieces, and for a change add some tomato sauce or a little mushroom ketchup. Serve in the casserole.

Beef en Casserole.—If steak is too dear use shin of beef. Cut into neat pieces. Season with salt and pepper and dredge a little flour over. Chop and fry an onion with the meat. Add some shred bacon or skinned slices, sausage, a pinch of sugar and of mixed herbs, some cooked butter beans and sliced boiled carrot. Cover with stock, cook very gently until the meat is done. Brown and thicken the sauce or merely add a little glass of a spoon ful of marmite to it and serve very hot. Macaroni can be added or haricot beans, and, of course, rabbit or chicken is excellent cooked en casserole with bacon and onion added.

Butter Beans en Casserole.—Wash and then soak the beans for twelve hours and then cook them in enough water to cover well. Bring to boiling point, and then simmer most gently until soft and the water absorbed. Slice about half the quantity of boiled carrot and a quarter the quantity of raw onion. Fry the onion in a casserole, add the carrot and butter beans, stir about and add salt and pepper and a little margarine. Serve with meat.

True Recuperation.

One would not want to live always above the clouds, nor stay too long satiated with glacier and precipice; he could not if he chose. But how refreshing it would be for these busy lives of the mart, to leave their narrow spheres and lovely doings for a day occasionally, for the mountain side, where they would think upon themes and breathe an atmosphere, a day of which would be worth years of life measured by commercial standards.—Selected.

Putting It Strongly.

Eddie was thoughtful of others. One day at lunch there was a pudding of which he was fond. He had one serving and saw there was enough for another, but he was afraid some one else might want it. After asking each one individually and finding no one wanted it, he swept all with a glance, saying "Wouldn't you eat it if I was dead?"

Record One's Own Thoughts.

"We view the world with our own eyes, each of us, and we make from within us the world we see," wrote Thackeray. "A weary heart gets no gladness out of sunshine; a selfish man is skeptical about friendship, as a man with no ear doesn't care for music."

Pink Lawn, White Yoke, Revers and Collars.

Dainty separate waist of pink lawn with a deep yoke of white. Revers and collar of white have a pink hem.

One of the charms of this separate blouse is its color scheme. The model is fashioned from pink lawn, but the deep yoke is of white, with collar and revers of the same. A pink hem is hemstitched to the collar and revers, giving the necessary touch of color after a sudden "break" from pink to white in the waist and yoke. In medium size the design requires 2 yards 36-inch pink and ¾ yard 36-inch white lawn. Either pink or white may be used for the narrow ruffle that outlines the deep yoke.

Since a contracting material is used for the yoke, unusual care must be taken with the cutting of the waist. Note the part of the cutting guide which shows the placement of yoke and revers. This shows that the pattern must be placed on a lengthwise thread of an open width of material. Now, this rule must be followed in using white lawn, just as if the waist were being developed entirely in pink.

The sleeve and cuff, however, are laid on an open width of pink material, after which the lawn is folded to cut the remaining parts of the waist. A strip of lawn long enough to accommodate the back yoke will have to be cut from the white material and the yoke placed on the lengthwise fold as illustrated, with the collar included. The back of the waist is laid on a lengthwise fold of pink lawn, while the front and trimming piece are placed on a lengthwise thread.

The underbody requires 1 yard of 36-inch material and this is folded as also shown in the cutting guide. Place the back directly on the lengthwise fold, then put the medium and front on a lengthwise thread.

With the various pieces properly placed, the home dressmaker may find that there will be no waste of material, nor mistake in the work, proceed with the cutting, confident.

The smartest of the new blouses feature deep yokes which are made of all kinds of materials in contrast to the waist proper. Herein lies a strong hint for the dressmaker who has a genius for combining small quantities of goods into a delightful whole.

Separate skirts usually fashioned from one of the soft woolen materials, are generally made on conser-

Struggle for Verity.

An old colored man who was before Judge Sanford for drunkenness and had his sentence suspended, largely on account of his age, which must be nearly eighty years, in an effort to brace up his reputation for truth and veracity remarked to one of the court officers: "I always means and intends to tell de troof, I does, even if I has to lie a little to do it."—Berkshire Courier.

On Drinking Water.

A hearty specialist once said that whenever she saw a woman with a face resembling a dried apple she knew for a certainty that that woman did not drink enough water. The same cause which results in the drying of the apple, operates in the case of the dried skin—lack of water.

Strong Soul Never Gives Up.

The tendency to perversity, to persist in spite of hindrances, discouragements and impossibilities—it is this that in all things distinguishes the strong soul from the weak.—Charles.

Spots on Furniture.

Essence of peppermint, applied with a soft cloth, will successfully remove the white spots that so frequently mar highly polished surfaces on furniture. Furniture polish ordinarily will not do the work, especially when used on the surface of a piano or any other hand-rubbed mahogany surface. A few drops on a cheese-cloth rag, rubbed vigorously, will wipe out the spots.

The Greatest Love.

No language can express the power and beauty and heroism and majesty of a mother's love. It shrinks not where man cowers, and grows stronger where man faints, and over the wastes of worldly fortune sends the radiance of quenchless fidelity like a star in heaven.—E. H. Chapin.

Testing Oil's Specific Gravity.

The specific gravity of oil may be ascertained by taking a glass vessel and weighing it; then weigh into it one ounce of water and mark the point where the water reaches; then fill to this mark with oil and weigh it. Express the weight of the oil as a decimal part of one ounce, which will be the specific gravity of the oil. That of grease may be obtained in the same manner, pouring the melted grease into the vessel.

No Friend of the Onion.

A medical authority says the oil in the onion is a deadly enemy to the germ that causes colds. It is hoped other doctors take up the suggestion and keep it going. We hate onions in all genders and persons.—Kansas City Star.

True Friend a Constant Delight.

A true friend embraces our objects as his own. We feel another mind bent on the same end, enjoying it, insuring it, reflecting it and delighting in our devotion to it.—William Elder Chan-ling.

Meeting an Old Friend

It is like calling on an old friend when a newspaper reader visits a store whose advertisement appears day after day.

The constant stories of goods and service, the reiteration of the name, have established acquaintance.

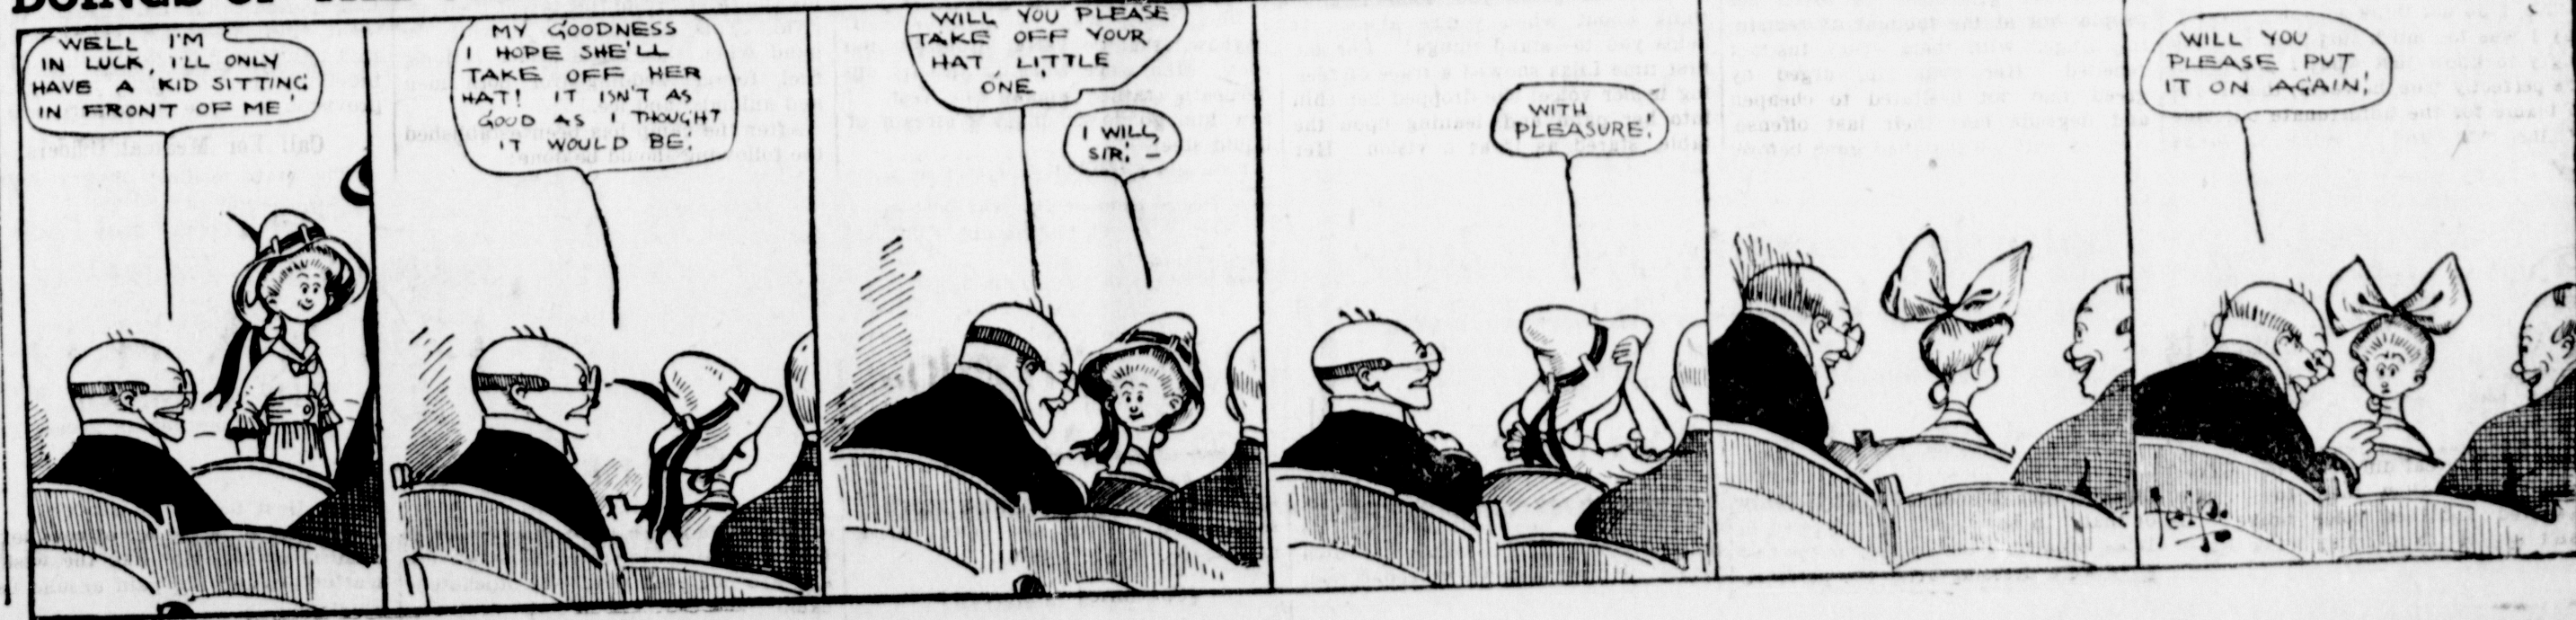

Confidence has been inspired by the printed word and the visit to the store comes under happy auspices.

It is not hard for the dealer to make a sale, for the visitor looks upon him as a daylight man.

Sometimes the influence of advertising is subtle, but its power is beyond estimate.

SPECULATION ON MEXICAN AFFAIR

United States Must Establish a Stable Government.

PROTECTORATE PROBABLE.

Likelihood That We May Be Obligated to Maintain Army of Occupation in the Republic For Several Years. Many Changes May Take Place in Senate.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, June 26.—(Special.)—Where will the Mexican situation end? Or when will it end? Those are questions few men can answer. We have seen enough to know that intervention has been inevitable. The United States must establish tranquility and a stable government. But whose government?

As usual, more questions can easily be asked in ten minutes in a case of this kind than can be answered in as many hours. In this case it will take as many years, for once intervention has begun in earnest it will take ten years to settle our relations with that country.

Protectorate Probable.

A protectorate or permanent occupation are among the things which may be expected as a result of the Mexican complications. It may be necessary for the United States to remain in Mexico for many years and to at least exercise as much control over Mexico as it does over Cuba. Perhaps it will be necessary to go further and maintain a force of considerable size in Mexico in order to preserve the peace which is supposed to be so earnestly desired by the people.

In this connection I doubt whether the people of Mexico care a snap about peace. They have shown that they like the sort of thing they have been getting.

Senate Changes.

On account of the primaries and the elections this fall it would not be surprising to see many changes in the next senate. Already it has been demonstrated that several senators will not be with us after the 4th of next March. Some of them have served a long time and have become familiar figures in the national capital. Of course much depends upon the way the election of a number of senators. Many will win with Wilson or go down to defeat with him if that should happen.

Power of the Speaker.

Congressman Ashbrook "let the cat out of the bag" that is, he let it be known that the speaker has not been shorn of all power. He wanted to pass a bill and said that he had been to the speaker for two months, but had failed to secure his consent to have the bill called up.

That started something. Uncle Joe Cannon took a hand in the discussion. He referred to the time when he was speaker. "All kinds of accusations were made against me," he said. "I was called a czar. Some members said, 'The speaker would not let us consider bills,' using the refuge of cowardice." Then he went on to say what has always been true of the house—that a majority can always pass a bill if it is determined.

A "Compromise."

When Chairman Fitzgerald called up the sundry civil appropriation bill he was for pushing it along.

"How much time for general debate?" asked Mondell of Wyoming, representing the minority.

"About two minutes," replied Fitzgerald.

"Let us compromise on two hours," replied Mondell.

And that was finally the result.

Presidential Protection.

They have actually passed a bill to stop threats against the president, although it was recalled that all efforts to protect the life of the president after the assassination of McKinley went up in smoke and talk. This bill may have some difficulty in the senate when the constitutional lawyers get hold of it.

By No Means a Novice.

The Republicans who called upon Mr. Hughes before he left Washington had just the kind of a reception they liked. For instance, John W. Dwight, who managed Mr. Root's campaign, and former Speaker Cannon called to gether, "to pay our respects, Mr. Justice," as Uncle Joe put it.

"No more 'Mr. Justice' talk," replied Mr. Hughes, "and no call of respects. You gentlemen are the kind of men I want to give me advice and talk about the campaign and help with the organization. You are the kind of men that I need."

Another Bureau in Prospect.

Some fellow has conceived the idea of a "bureau of time," with himself at the head of it. Bills have been introduced to create a commission to standardize time and report and make recommendations. It will not be long before there is a "commissioner of time," just as we have other commissions with good paying salaries.

The Best Kind.

When a man has established a reputation for honesty and integrity, when he has put forth his best endeavor to be a good citizen and to support his family in comfort, and be a good neighbor, and the community in which he lives is better for his having lived in it, he represents the very best society to be found on earth.

(Medical Advertising) PLAIN QUESTIONS TO GETTYSBURG PEOPLE

Every Gettysburg Reader Will Admit the Soundness of the Logic.

Would Gettysburg people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as they do if the medicine were not reliable? Would they confirm their statements after years have elapsed if their experiences did not show the remedy to be deserving of it? Statements like the following must carry conviction to the mind of every reader: Mrs. W. N. Flaherty, 311 Washington St., Gettysburg, says: "I had weak kidneys for a long time, I had to get up often during the night, which made me tired out and gave me headaches. I also had backaches and pains in my sides. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected all these troubles strengthening my kidneys." (Statement given July 23, 1912).

On February 12, 1916, Mrs. Flaherty said: "I am a very strong endorser of Doan's Kidney Pills. They have given me fine benefit and I always keep them on hand in case of necessity." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Flaherty has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
